Did you ever hear the story of Newton, and his little dog Diamond? One day, when he was fifty years old, and had been hard at work for more than twenty years, studying the theory of light, he went out of his chamber, leaving his little dog asleep before the fire. On the table lay a heap of manuscript papers containing all the discoveries which Newton had made during those twenty years. When his master was gone, up rose little Diamond, jumped upon the table, and overthrew the lighted candle. The papers immediately caught fire.

Just as the destruction was complete, Newton opened the chamber door, and perceived that the labours of twenty years were reduced to a heap of ashes. There stood little Diamond, the author of the mischief. Almost any other man would have sentenced the dog to immediate death. But Newton patted him on the head with his usual kindness, although grief was at his heart. "O Diamond, Diamond", exclaimed he, "thou little knowest the mischief than hast done".

This incident affected his health and spirits for some time afterwards, but from his conduct towards the little dog, you may judge what was the sweetness of his temper.
